ABSTRACT

The present invention provides a system and method within a high availability network for monitoring and managing cluster membership. The cluster membership monitor provides the ability to maintain a list of current cluster members, monitor status of each peer node on the cluster, stay apprised of each nodes viability, elect a master node for the cluster when necessary, and coordinate reformation as members join and leave the cluster.